ADJUDICATOR'S GROUND FOR REFUSAL (extracts)

"Although in my view the Entry Clearance Officer was justified on the evidence before him in refusing the application, the oral testimony could be sufficient to tip the balance in the appellants (Anwar's three children) favour. The object and purpose ... is to enable the adjudicator ... from his impression of the witnesses ... to judge their credibility... I could not accept that Anwar Ditta and Hamida Rafique were simple Asian village women ... Although they left the UK in mid-childhood ... be lacking in education, they had an excellent command English and were far more westernised and sophisticated in their demeanor than the average member of the immigrant community... I cannot exclude from any consideration the credibility of members of the family... It has long been accepted that if a person has lied once it does not mean that they will never tell the truth and persons should not be penalised for a previous lie by being prevented from having family re-united... The PARENTS (Anwar & Shuja) of the appellants have on their own admission on several occasions lied to, or deceived, persons in official positions both in the UK and Pakistan... In these circumstances I cannot find that the appellants have on the balance of probabilities discharged the burden of proof on them and dismiss the appeal"

ALL BRACKETS OUR OWN

COMMENTS

The so-called lies and deceits the adjudicator refers to are:

1. Anwar was married in Pakistan to Shuja ud din at the age of 14½ and the Maulvi (the person officiating the marriage) put her age as 22 because 14½ is below the legal age of marriage in Pakistan without the consent of the guardian.+1
2. Anwar and Shuja remarried in the local register office in Rochdale where they agreed that they were a bachelor and spinster, while they had already married each other in Pakistan (because they thought that their Muslim marriage in Pakistan would not be accepted in England).

notes

- +1 A girl in Pakistan can validly marry below the age of 16, if she has attained puberty, though the person officiating the marriage would be liable to punishment under the child marriage restraint act (and also the groom - unless a minor)

A Tribute to Comrade Arjan Das Kataria

Comrade Arjan Das Kataria tragically died on a demonstration in support of the campaign to bring Anwar's children home on Saturday November 15th in Rochdale. Comrade Kataria was a heroic fighter for the working class and black people in Britain and firm supporter of the struggle against neo-colonialism in India. Before he left India in 1963 comrade Kataria was a member of the Republican Party of India, a party founded by Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar to fight for independence and the rights of the Dalit people, the so-called untouchable the most oppressed people of India's toiling masses. Comrade Kataria was a founder member of The Dalit Mukhti Alliance and a tireless fighter for human dignity and equality of all people. He was an active member of the Indian Workers' Association, a shop steward in the AUNW of Harold Quilty and the Black Ink Foundation and a brave fighter against racism. Comrade Kataria was 57 years of age and leaves behind a widow and children. His funeral was held on Friday 20th November 1980 at West Bromwich Crematorium, Newton Rd., West Bromwich, and attended by anti-racists all over the country. We salute this valiant fighter for Human dignity who devoted his life to the fight against the criminality of the system we live in. We extend our most heartfelt condolences to his family, comrades in the IWA (GB) and those who worked with him.

2. The adjudicator completely failed to recognize the fact that due to the frequent changes in the law it is perfectly understandable that Amner believed that her Muslim marriage in Pakistan would not be accepted here and decided to go through the formality of a marriage in a registry office. What relation does Amner's command of English or sophistication has with the complications of law?

1. The adjudicator failed to give proper consideration to Amner's plea that she was married to Shuja Ud Din in Pakistan and the consequent co-habitation, and concentrated on the fact that Amner's age was given incorrectly. A girl in Pakistan can validly marry below the age of 16, if she has attained puberty, though the person officiating and the groom if he was over 18 would be liable for punishment under the child marriage restraint act. This particular act is not in strict accordance with the Islamic Shariah, the clergy never occupied it fully and people do not feel any moral obligation to abide by the child marriage restraint act because a girl marrying below the age of 16 does not break any known ethical code. This particular act does not even restrict the will of forced child marriage because even under this act the guardian of a minor can give a girl to a boy in marriage - the only safeguard it provides is that such a marriage can be repudiated if the girl so desires after attaining majority. Amner did not have an arranged marriage and she was 14 years of age when she got married. Why is it so difficult to understand the reasons for giving her age not by Amner herself, as 20 when she was only 14? If the adjudicator would concentrate on the fact that Amner was married to Shuja in Pakistan he would have found it easier to accept the three children as Amner's.

The Adjudicators Ground for refusal

(Extracts from determination delivered at hearing 30-7-80)

Appellants..... Kamran Shuja
Imran Shuja
Saima Shuja

Determination and reasons

"This is the appeal of Kamran Shuja, Imran Shuja and Saima Shuja, stated to be aged 9,7, and 6 respectively, of Pakistan against the refusal to grant them entry clearance to join for settlement the joint sponsors Shuja Ud Din and Anwar Sultana Ditta of Rochdale as their stated parents...In their evidence the sponsors did not dispute...At the time of marriage she was 14½ and because this was below the legal age of marriage, her age was falsely given as 22 (actually 20, shows what attention the adjudicator paid to evidence submitted-ADDC) ...three children was born to them in Pakistan. The husband dissatisfied with the amount he could earn in Pakistan, left to seek work in Denmark but was unable ...Germany and France. He travelled to the United Kingdom as a transit passenger, overstayed and eventually was given leave to remain permanently. His wife wished to return to the United Kingdom which she considered to be her home having been born here...On arrival in the United Kingdom she and her husband were told that the Pakistan marriage was not recognised in the United Kingdom so they married again in the local register office ... They said that they told the registrar that they were a bachelor and spinster and made no mention of the Pakistan marriage because they had been told it would not be recognised in the United Kingdom...The sponsor's sister, in her evidence, told basically of the same sequence of events. The impression given by her was adversely affected by her scarcely concealed hostility to not only the proceedings in general, but also to the sponsor's representative...The object and purpose of oral hearing is to enable the adjudicator to have the benefit of hearing evidence given personally and from his impression of the witnesses and their demeanour to judge credibility...I have in particular, to consider the credibility of the sponsor, her husband and her sister...I could not accept that Anwar Ditta...simple village woman ...Although they left the United Kingdom in mid-childhood after being born here and may in consequence, be lacking in education, they had an excellent command of English and were far more westernised and sophisticated in their demeanour than the average member of the immigrant community...

It has long been accepted and rightly so that if a person has lied once it does not mean that they will never tell the truth, and persons should not be penalised for a previous lie by being prevented from having their family reunited...The PARENTS of the appellants have on their own admission on several occasions lied to, or deceived, persons in official positions both in the United Kingdom and Pakistan. How can they therefore expect us to give any weight to their credibility?...In consequence of their own admitted lies and deceptions...I am unable to accept the credibility of the principal witnesses. A large quantity of documentary evidence was produced...There were the usual legal birth and marriage certificates, I saw none of the family letters. Some of the remittance receipts were dated prior to the application and those...which pointed unequivocally to the relationship but were too few in number...In those circumstances I cannot find that the appellants have on the balance of probabilities discharged the burden of proof upon them and dismiss the appeal."

A Reply to Some Peripheral Matters Raised by The Adjudicator

The home office originally refused the children's application on the grounds that the secretary of state was not satisfied that Kamran, Imran, and Saima were related to Anwar Sultana Ditta and Shuja Ud Din as claimed. The adjudicator in his determination refers to Anwar and Shuja as the parents of the appellants and cynically adds 'It has long been accepted that if a person has lied once it does not mean that they will never tell the truth and persons should not be penalised for a previous lie by having their family reunited. The so-called lies and deceptions the adjudicator referred to are:

1. Anwar was 14½ when she married Shuja in Pakistan and her age was recorded as 22 (actually 20).
2. Anwar and Shuja married in Rochdale at the registry where they agreed they were a bachelor and a spinster when they were already married to each other, because they were told by a friend that their Muslim marriage in Pakistan would not be accepted here.
3. Shuja was an over-stayer (his stay was regularised long before the appeal and he always had the legal right to be in Britain).

The only issue relevant to the case is whether the three children (the appellants) are Anwar's and that should not be determined by the adjudicator's subjective view about the credibility of the principal witnesses, or his opinion about the sophistication of the average member of the immigrant community. If the object and purpose of a hearing is to judge credibility of the principal witnesses then it is indeed

Anwar's Evidence

Anwar has the photographs of herself in Pakistan with her children, and with relatives who have never been in this country. Witnesses include Hameeda her sister, who was present at the birth of her first child, Kamran. She has an identity card issued in Pakistan bearing her thumb print. Her medical record in this country shows that she suffered from asthma as a child and required frequent medical attention, but there was a gap of thirteen years before she reregistered with a Doctor in this country. Her father declared an affidavit that he sent Anwar to Pakistan at the age of 9 with her sister Hameeda.

Anwar Sultana Ditta did not have three children in Pakistan

"There is a similarity in eyes and even names between the children of Jamila and the three applicants"

The immigration officer here implies that the applicants are the children of Anwar's sister-in-law.

Jamila's 6 children and Anwar's three children photographed together

WHAT THE HOME OFFICE SAYS

The home office has refused the children's applications on the grounds that the secretary of state "was not satisfied that Kamran, Iqbal and Salma were related to Anwar Sultana Ditta and Shuja Ud Din as claimed".

It is not clear what the Home office thinks really did happen, and, in any case the Home office doesn't have to offer a consistent story to support the refusal. The onus of proof is entirely on Anwar and her family.

Two suggestions are made indirectly in the Home office statement as to what their officials appear to have believed about the case. Anwar has a great deal of evidence to show that this suggestion is false:

I Anwar Sultana Ditta never went to Pakistan

First of all the entry clearance officer says:

"I pointed out that no clear evidence of Anwar Sultana Ditta ever having been in Pakistan had been produced"

Later on in the statement he says:

"It appeared that there might be two Anwar Sultana Dittas, i.e. one who married Shuja Ud Din in Pakistan in 1958 and the other whom Shuja Ud Din married in the United Kingdom in 1975"

No positive supporting argument is offered for this extraordinary suggestion:

It is just the home office who are saying that and without investigating. When a person commits a crime, for example murder, they only need one or two witnesses to convict him.

I have got more than ten or twenty witnesses who can prove they are my children, but the home office doesn't bother to ask them. There's my sister who lives in Nelson who was present at the birth of my children but nobody bothered to ask her. The home office can investigate in Canada, Denmark, and in London, Stoke-on-Trent, Nelson, Manchester, Bradford and Rochdale. They can investigate in Pakistan and Kuwait. They can ask about the photographs, they can ask people who know us. It is really ridiculous. They could investigate. Why don't they investigate? Because they don't care for Black people. It is really unfair. They have no feeling for human beings.

Why should we pay a bill of £383 for phone calls for other people's children. That money was out of my husband's pocket.

He works seven days a week. He has to send money home - That's £50 or £60 a month, he's got to pay a mortgage of £50 a month, and we have got to run ourselves. The adjudicator said the remittance receipts were too few. What is the price of mother's feelings to him? We send what we can afford.

It's six months since we bought any clothes. When ever we go down town we have never gone together, we just do ordinary shopping and come back home - we know that we can't afford anything else. Why are our children going to a private school in Pakistan. Because they are our children, and we don't want them to get into problems with English when they come here. I know how children are treated when they come here - they get called blacks and all that. Why do they do all these things. It's the government who begin all these things by saying the blacks are taking all the jobs and the blacks are taking all the houses. The blacks work for it, they work very hard. They save money and buy things, they buy their house, they send money for their children. They want their families here. I was accusing the Labour government because the laws are very strict, but just think the conservatives don't like black people. If the Labour government was destroying people's lives and destroying my family, how can the conservatives be of any help to me?

Why am I going to these meetings, why am I getting people to help me? Because they are my children. Do you think it is easy to campaign? It's really ridiculous, making black people suffer and destroying their families. What kind of law is this? God knows what hell we are going through. But we are not dealing with human beings.

The Case of Anwer Ditta in Her Own Words

I was born in 28-11-53 in Birmingham. I was brought up in Rochdale. My parents were separated in 1962 and custody was given to my father. He sent my sister and me to Pakistan.

I was married in 1968. I had my first child on 7-11-70, the second was born 21-6-72. The girl was born on 16-7-73. I came to England in 1975 and Samera, my fourth child, was born on 6-4-76. I applied for my children to come here in 1976, and as evidence gave them birth certificates, photographs of the children - some with me in them - and the children's medical cards. And after all these the home-office still refused to believe me. Why?

I am willing to give a medical test. I am willing to give a skin test. I am willing to go onto a lie detector to prove that they are my children. I'm not telling them any lies, why should I tell them lies? Why should I claim other people's children? I hate to use the word claim, but this is the word Home office use. I applied for my children.

People think why did I leave the children? This is not a crime. I didn't know English law. I didn't know that I could bring my children straight away and the home office would have provided them with accommodation, money and everything. If I had known that I wouldn't have been going through all this trouble now. I thought that if I go to England and get a job and buy a house and we have got settled then I'll call the children. I didn't want my children to suffer. I didn't want my children to go to jail. Some people tell lies and bring other people's children under other names but I am doing it the legal way because they are my children.

(The home office) can say anything. They are saying in the statement that details of the young children in the family are similar - their ages, even their names. But why should I call my sister-in-law's children? Why should I want to look after anyone else's children? Why should we suffer the way we are suffering? We've got no social life except the worrying and suffering and struggling and thinking how we are going to pay the bills. We never thought of going out. We never even have a decent day. We are never happy, sometimes we never even have smiles on our faces for days and weeks. Why? Because they are our children. There's nobody in the world who can prove they're not our children.

INTRODUCTION

For 4 1/2 years, Anwar Ditta, a Birmingham born woman, has been fighting against the racist immigration laws to be reunited with her three children - Seema, Imran, and Kamran. For 4 1/2 years Anwar and her husband Shuja, have been denied the basic democratic right to lead a normal family life with their children. Anwar first applied unsuccessfully for permission to bring her children here from Pakistan under a Labour government. Her appeal was heard on 22th April and 16th May and rejected on 30th July under the Tory government. On 16th September 1980, her leave to appeal was refused and on 30th September the Home office decided the case of Anwar Ditta closed. Cyril Smith, Anwar's MP, refused to make any further representation on her behalf. It is worth mentioning that the Liberals have a policy to oppose all immigration controls in reality their leading member of parliament has refused to uphold even the most basic human right. The only way Anwar will ever be reunited with her family is if we can build a genuinely anti-racist movement. YOU have the power to bring Anwar's children home. Since the campaign started, Anwar has got the support of a number of organisations and individuals, including MPs and trade union branches. We must keep the pressure on. Support Anwar and help build the broadest possible united front to uphold the most fundamental and basic human right black people are denied today - the right to bring dependants without racist harassment and annoying delays.

3. It is of no relevance to the case that Shuja was originally given a transit visa and he over-stayed. His stay had been regularised and the hearing was not about Shuja's immigration status. The fact that he is freely admitting that he over-stayed should be considered in his favour and not held against him.
4. The adjudicator dismissed the large quantity of documentary evidence as 'there were the usual local birth and marriage certificates.'
5. Remittance receipts were dismissed as too few.
6. No weight was given to medical evidence submitted.
7. The evidence of Anwar's sister, an eye witness, was not given proper consideration because she was, according to the adjudicator, hostile to the whole proceedings.

Answer is not the only case

The lawyer for the Home Office speaking in the High Court on 2nd October 1980 said that "The whole system of immigration control is based upon discrimination. It is of the essence of the immigration act that people will be discriminated against on the grounds of race or nationality and it is the function of certain officials to ensure that the discrimination is effective."

To change that situation it is imperative to form the broadest possible united front against racism, a campaign to extend the democratic rights of an individual, what ever its form, is in essence a campaign against the institutionalised racism of the society we live in, against the particular, by fighting for the most basic human and democratic rights of a mother-to-lead a normal family life with her children. We are in essence fighting against the criminality of the system we live in. Here are brief details of a few of the other cases in Greater Manchester.

Munir Ahmad: Lives in Oldham. Being threatened with deportation because he got married between the time of his entry interview and entry into this country. Nobody ever asked him about his marital status, but he is still being accused of entering by deception.

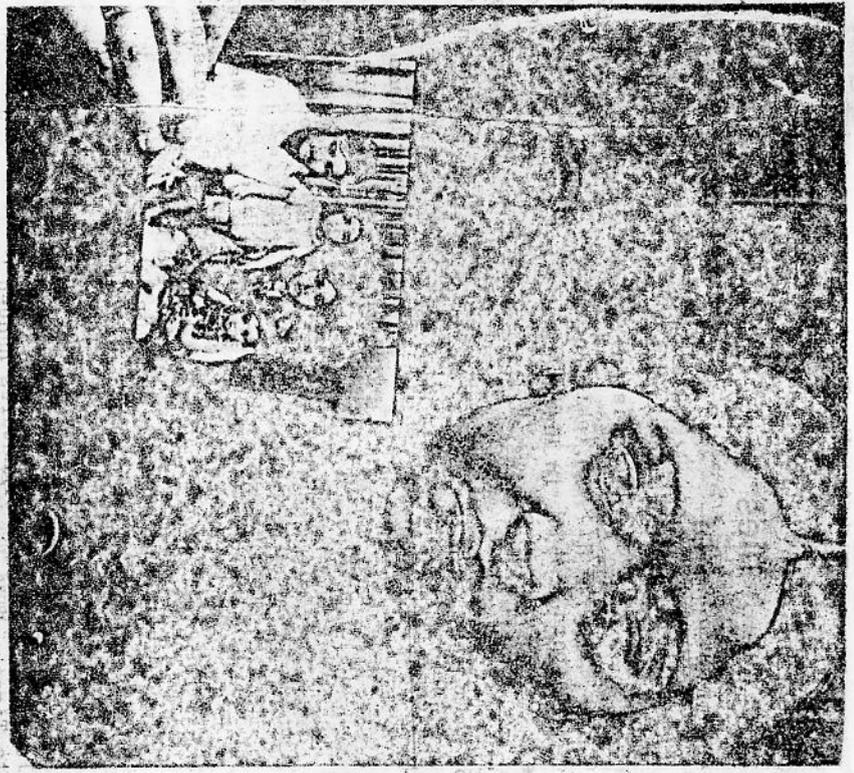

Nesira Begum: being threatened with deportation because her husband deserted her. She now has a child in an adjudicator's care, but the Home Office has appealed against that decision. She lives at Longbridge, can be contacted c/o 595 Stockport Rd., M/G-13 every Monday.

Shahida Durrani: lives in Oldham. The Home Office says that she has rights to live here because of his periodic visits to Pakistan. She has lived and worked in Oldham for nearly two decades and suffers from Parkinson disease.

Kd. Perai of Rochdale: separated from family for 9 years. Ummida Ali of Rochdale: Separated from family for 10 years. Nesreen Akhtar of Rochdale threatened with deportation because her husband deserted her. Her children will also be deported with her if the campaign fails.

Daniel Ricketts of Manchester: being threatened with deportation because his marriage broke down. He has a child from that marriage. Daniel can be contacted c/o West Indian Centre, Cannon Rd., Manchester 13.

Md. Saifi of Rochdale: separated from son because X-ray test determined the child to be older than what he actually is according to his father.

How Britain helps to create broken homes

Jane Jackson writes: For five years Awar Din, a British born woman, has fought a Home Office decision which prevents three of her children joining her from Pakistan. Immigration officials deny she is the children's natural mother and a long delayed appeal in Manchester next week will hear the Home Office's bizarre and contradictory speculation about who is the real mother. Civil servants suggest that the children's father has married twice, once to a woman called Awar, Sultana Dina, or alternatively that the children are the illegitimate offspring of their father's sister.

Awar Dina was nine and living in Rochdale in 1962 when her parents divorced. She was sent to live with her grandfather in Pakistan. There she married Shuja ul Din and bore three children - Karam, now 19, Jaran, 8, and Samira, 7. In 1975 she brought her husband to Rochdale, her home town, and for a few months while they searched for work and a home, the children stayed behind with Shuja's mother in Pakistan. Shuja soon found work as a teacher and they began buying a house. The mortgage application records the three children as dependent.

When the parents sent for the children they faced a Home Office refusal to ship them into the country. The Home Office says because the appeal now contends that "No evidence shows Sultana Dina ever having been in Pakistan had been produced, and speculate that there might be two Awar

Shahida Durrani, one who married Shuja ul Din in Pakistan and the other whom Shuja ul Din married in the United Kingdom in 1975. However, the Home Office case the basis of proceedings with Awar Dina. She has to disprove the allegations and prove she is the children's mother. The evidence against the Home Office arguments is overwhelming. Awar Dina's Pakistani identity card (circled) and British passport (circled) and a collection of family photographs showing her with the children in Pakistan. Birth certificates are not directly helpful because of the Pakistan practice of recording them only if the father's name is known. Shuja ul Din is a father. The UK Inland Revenue, however, after its own searching inquiries recognised the couple as the children's parents.

FIGHT THE RACIST IMMIGRATION LAWS

Brother's Sister's

Anwar Ditta 'Bring my children home!'

YOU have the power to bring my children home. Come out and demonstrate. That's the message of Anwar Ditta, who for the past four and a half years has been struggling to be reunited with her three young children.

What is preventing her is the barbed wire round Britain's coast in the form of the Immigration Act. Your opportunity to demonstrate your opposition to these racist laws is on Saturday, 15 November in Rochdale. Assemble at Church Side, off Drake St. at noon. Speakers from the Pakistani, Indian, Kashmiri, and Bangladeshi workers' associations.

Rochdale Observer

Mother's pligh

19 January

Mrs Anwar Ditta, the Rochdale mother campaigning for the right to have her three children come to England from Pakistan, spoke about her plight to members of Rochdale Trades Council on Wednesday.

The Trades Council has judged support to Mrs Ditta a top priority for an early hearing. Her appeal against the Home Office decision not to allow the children to come to Rochdale.

Mrs Ditta also received support from the Rochdale Community Labour Party on Wednesday.

Racist British State Denies the Most Basic Rights of National Minority People

The British state has a record of racist laws which deprive the national minorities of even the most basic democratic rights. For example, the right of a family to be united. At this time, there are many cases of families being unable to join their husbands, wives, mothers, etc., settled in Britain. They are kept on "waiting lists" which can last for four years before an interview is granted by the Home Office, and many dependants of workers settled here are refused entry on spurious grounds, minor "discrepancies" in the interview, etc.

An example of a family which the Home Office has not allowed to be united is that of Mrs. Anwar Ditta. Anwar was born in Birmingham in 1953, and sent to Pakistan by her father in 1962. She subsequently married her husband Shuja-Ud Din in Pakistan in 1968. Shuja came to Britain in 1974, and Anwar herself returned in 1975, leaving behind three children who were born in Pakistan - Kamran, Imran and Saima.

After having settled and bought a house in Rochdale, Anwar and Shuja applied for their three children's entry in September, 1976. The application was refused on May 18, 1979, and the appeal was also refused in July this year. Then, on September 16, 1980, an adjudicator's decision was refused, closing the last channel in the legal battle of the family for the three children to be reunited with their parents. The documents and other evidence submitted by Anwar and Shuja were fully valid and were not challenged by the Home Office. The entire case of the Home Office rested on what it calls "lies and deceit" on the part of the parents towards the authorities. The alleged "lies and deceit" used as grounds for refusal, were that: 1) Anwar was married to Shuja at the age of 14 and the Maulvi priest put her age down as 22 at the time of marriage; and 2) Anwar and Shuja re-married in a local registry in Britain where they agreed they were a bachelor and spinster, thinking that their original marriage in Pakistan would not be recognised.

The Home Office considers the above "lies and deceit" to be "reasonable grounds" for refusing entry to three young children now living in Pakistan who wish to join their parents in Rochdale. Anwar and Shuja have refused to be intimidated by the Home Office and are continuing the struggle for their family to be reunited. A demonstration is being organised in Rochdale on Saturday, November 15, assembling at Church Side, off Drake Street, at 12 noon.

End Item

At the general management committee at the Smith Street headquarters, she reiterated her willingness to take a blood test and even a lie detector test to prove she is the mother of the three children.

She said: "I was born in Birmingham, brought up in Rochdale, and when I was 15 I went with my father to Pakistan where I was 15 and came to England in 1973 with my children, to earn money and provide a home for them in Rochdale."

Mrs Ditta, of 17, Clarendon Street, Rochdale, photocopied and letters which she says prove the children aged six, seven and six are hers. She regularly telephones them and sends money and clothes. All attempts to bring them into England have failed. A letter sent to the Prime Minister was "receiving the reply that she was 'receiving attention' and told members

Some 100 members to bring a mass picket on 2 Saturday, outside Rochdale Conservative Party headquarters in Drake Street in support of her cause. A collection of £20 was presented to her at the end of the meeting.
